Course Description: This section of FIQWS is a composition course that will explore investigate individual acts of process and writing through the lens of readings from your topic section.

Composition Course Learning Outcomes:

- Explore and analyze, in writing and reading, a variety of genres and rhetorical situations.
- Develop strategies for reading, drafting, collaborating, revising and editing.
- Recognize and practice key rhetorical terms and strategies when engaged in writing situations.
- Engage in the collaborative and social aspects of writing processes.
- Understand and use print and digital technologies to address a range of audiences.
- Locate research sources (including academic journal articles, magazine and newspaper articles) in the library's databases or archives and on the internet and evaluate them for credibility, accuracy, timeliness, and bias.
- Compose texts that integrate your stance with appropriate sources using strategies such as summary, critical analysis, interpretation, synthesis, and argumentation.
- Practice systematic application of citation conventions.

Course Policies and Procedures

Freshman Inquiry Writing Seminar (FIQWS): Ms. Rice-Evans and I are collaboratively teaching That's So Gay!. The topic and writing sections are structured to intersect. Ms. Rice-Evans and I will be collaborating on grades, assignments and communicating about your overall performance in both courses. You will have to participate fully in both courses in order to successfully complete the semester.

Accessibility Statement: I take seriously the needs of my students. This includes making accommodations for neurodiversity, learning disabilities, mental/emotional health, and any other situations not listed here. Please let me know how I can support your learning.

Attendance: This is a hybrid course so the expectation is that you participate online and attend face-to-face (f2f) class sessions.

Electronics and Communication: One of the goals of this course is to understand how to use electronics respectfully. You will be expected to use electronics during class time and it is up to you to stay present. All announcements will go through your CCONY email.

Contract Grading: Grading is subjective so I will let you decide what grade you want to work towards when completing each section of the course. Maybe you have a soul crushing midterm in another class and something due for our class on the same day -- you can choose to work towards a C, towards an B, or towards an A. There is no expectation or judgement if you need to work towards a passing grade instead of an exceptional grade; this class is not the only thing in any of our lives and we should honor that. Everyone starts the course with an A, and I reserve the right to increase grades where I see fit ;-) something unrelated to the class. We will reflect on these labor logs once a month in class to see if there's any patterns in the way we structure our time and what takes precedence. I will be completing these logs along with you.

Research Unit: We will go in depth into database research, understanding what different sources provide and when it is appropriate to use them. This section will involve research on a topic that you explore in your topic section. There will be multiple artifacts, one includes a reflective annotated bibliography.

Audience Unit: This will include time looking at different ways audience is evoked in different rhetorical situations and we will do this from a number of angles that will include "academic" and "non-academic" rhetorical situations.

"Writing" Unit: "Writing" is in quotes intentionally -- the major artifact you create during this portion of the class may or may not take the form of an essay. This section will include a combination of labor logs, research and a tangible product that shows best expresses the research you have completed.

Educate Unit: No one wants to be talked at during a presentation. This section will culminate in an educational presentation given to a small group of students that will require a demonstrative section where we do active learning.

Digital Portfolio: A final portfolio that will house versions of your artifacts on a digital platform of your choosing.
